FOREWORD

The Spotlight this term is, of course, devoted entirely to the Seniors. They are the editors, the copy, and the theme. Why then has another focal point been chosen? Stop for a moment and consider. You and you and you are seniors. That's fine but you can't be put in a pigeon-hole and left there. Each one of you is an individual personality. Each one of you has some talent, some special ability to do one thing particularly well. It is this talent that makes you different from the next senior and makes the next senior different from you. Talent then has to be an intrinsic part of the Yearbook.

"But I have no talent," you are saying. True you may not be talented in art, or music, or writing, but there are other talents. Some are far greater and more useful than these. For instance, look about your house when you go home tonight. See if the rooms are in order and notice the dinner. Doesn't someone in your family have a talent for making a home? Is it your mother, perhaps?

Then again your talent may not as yet be discovered. Thomas Hardy was nearly fifty before he started writing. Just the other day I read of an old woman, the operator of a news stand in Wall Street for ten years, who has recently tried her hand at sculpture. This old woman's work has been seen by experts and is called excellent. She, at last, has discovered her talent.

But for all our talents, discovered or not, there should be one rule. They should be used and developed. There is no more pitiful sight than that of a great talent wasted or permitted to lie fallow and decay. Whether you have special ability in science or writing, in languages or dancing, put it into practice.

Remember, only you have been given this special power to do this one thing well. Above everything else, put your talent to work and use it for some good purpose.

My Dear Girls,

War and rumors of war! That seems to be the keynote of the busy world in which many of you are about to take an active part.

However, in this country of ours the daily life of men, women and children goes on much the same as yesterday. Most of us will not be called on to play heroic, spectacular roles, but rather the quieter ones of routine duty.

We here in Julia Richman greet you, the members of our family who are leaving us, and hope that the ideals of living which all of you have been taught and the skills of earning a living which those of you who are about to seek work have labored to acquire, may make your lives happier, more gracious and more useful.

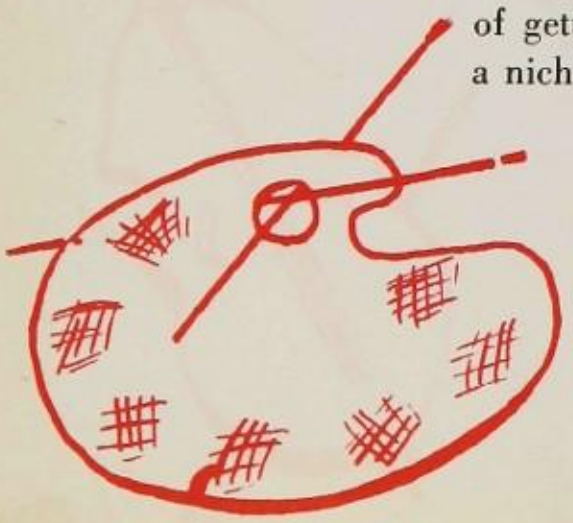
Art

A weary cobbler runs his hands lovingly over his work—a sigh of satisfaction escapes his lips. A slight sculptor gazes appraisingly at his marble statue—a warm glow lightens his sensitive features. A sturdy gardener wipes his brow and straightens his back—his fingers caress a colored petal. Into the lives of all these people came the desire to create, to look upon something completed and feel that they, not a helper nor a friend, have made something of value—be it boots, statues or—a flower. Realizing that many girls of Julia Richman High School possess this creative ability, the Art Department stands ever ready to offer its courses in such engrossing fields as Art Appreciation which gives one the opportunity to develop different forms of expression, General Design which enables one to gain a rigid foundation, and Elective Art composed of a variety of branches such as Commercial Illustration, and Costume Design which furnish one with the adequate means in which to specialize.

Just as all the years of training that a doctor puts in at medical school would be wasted if he never performed an operation, so all the talent that one possesses would be undiscovered or might even degenerate if one did not actually sit down and work on that talent. Thus the only method conducive to finding, improving and mellowing one's talent is hard work and perseverance.

To come to the important question that is on the lips of every youth talented in art who is graduating from high school. That is, "How can art (as a talent) be utilized in the outside business world?" Probably art has more branches than any other field today. Interior decorating, photography, window display, lighting, stage setting, and the more familiar designing of clothes and commercial illustration are just a few of the many occupations in which a knowledge of art would be essential. No special training is necessary—that is, no definite training, for if one is desirous of getting ahead one will gain all the knowledge the world has to offer and carve a niche for oneself that is secure and deserved.

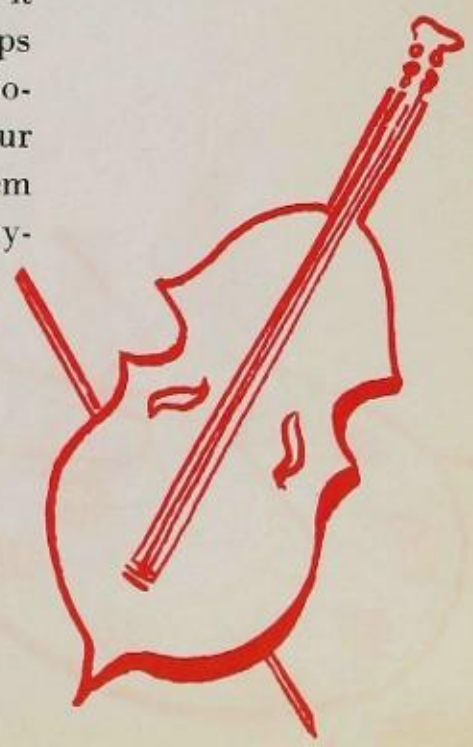


Music

There is music in our ears!

All around us the tuneful art is heard, swing—classics—sentimental; the Julia Richman horizon is swarming with musical bugs—the kind that listen—the kind that whistle—hum—as well as the kind that play instruments or sing. Just look in someday on room one fifty-one, and you're bound to see a species of the latter group—the virtuosi. You'll see the orchestra, struggling through their daily dozen—the glee club's glib faces, straining their faces much more than their voices to create a symphony of sound. You'll see an attentive harmony class here and there—and sometimes you'll hear whiffs of sounds being emitted from the massive machine in the mahogany case. Drifting around in the musical circle of Julia Richman, you'll find Miss Gould, Miss Burr, and Miss Hackett who supervise and conduct the various activities. Once in a while you'll hear an up and coming girl in assembly. Just as there are lots who are coming to the real stage of success, so there are some who have come. Perhaps you have heard of Evelyn Klien, Millicent Chandler, Philomena Aphetalny, Adela Kaplan, Anna Daube, Gertrude Burke, Maritza Lesovar, Bernice Kossoff, Caroline Schreuber, Ellen Arclenesky, Virginia Prieto, Ruth Vozab, and others.

But we not only offer you success in music—that is the claim of few—but to the very many Julia Richmanites we present the enjoyment of music. Yes, these are the talented ones, but they need you—they need your enjoyment of their art to make it worthwhile. And we know that every one of you enjoys some type of music. Perhaps swing appeals more readily to you than the classics—so the music department provides the swing—but they also dust you over with a bit of the other to broaden your view. And some of the hummers and mumblers whose puckered faces might seem incongruous at times play their part too. Music is a possession of everyone—of anyone who cares to listen.



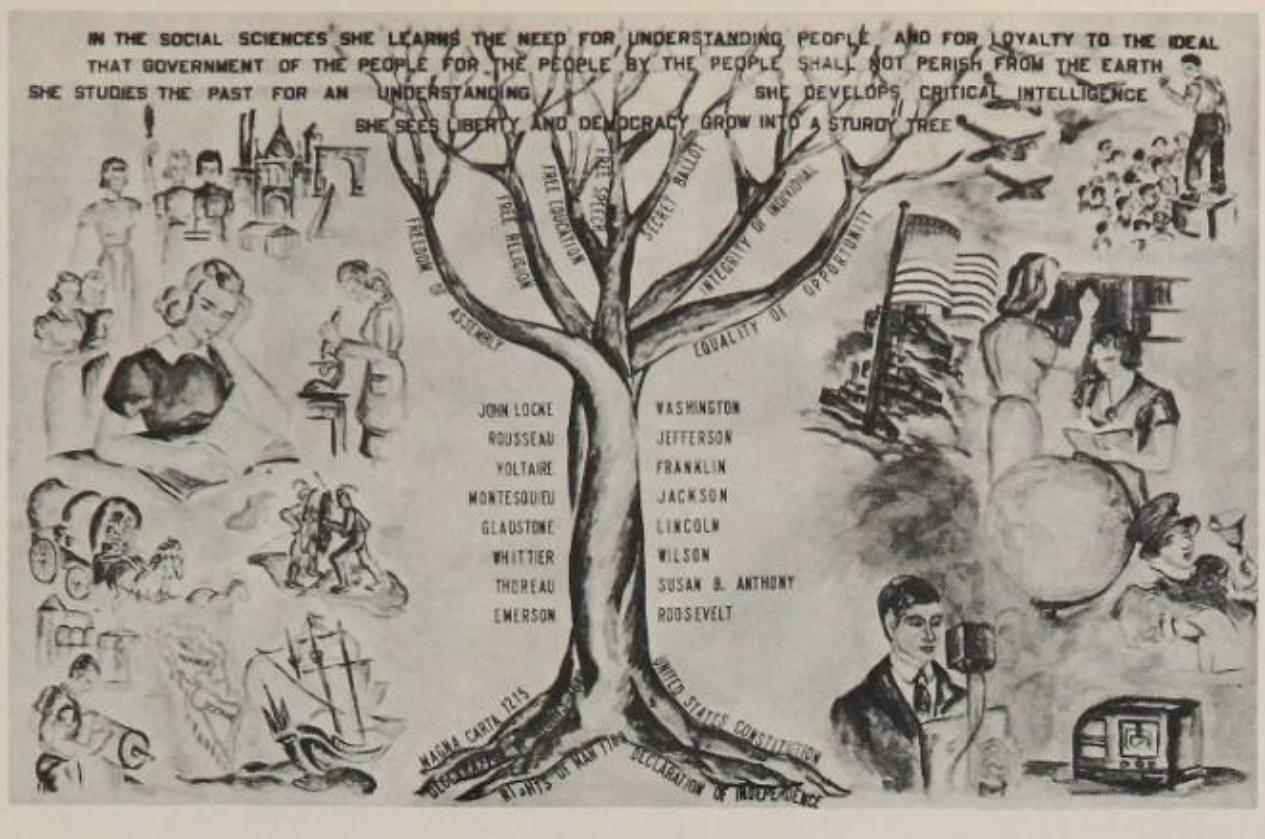
Be it French, German, Italian, Latin, or Spanish, we have all taken up at least one language in high school. And after plowing through a translation or trying to learn grammar and irregular verbs, many of us have doubted the values of anything but our own English. Yes, one may have to have a special talent to learn languages (I don't possess it) but once learned, languages can be of tremendous value.

Let us first take up the sad case of Latin. It seems that no one likes Latin these days. They tell us that it won't be of any use "later on." Well, in the dim realm of infinity called "later on" we may not have to challenge John Kieran's latin quotations but the language can be of use to us in other ways. While there is no necessity for talking in the ancient Roman tongue, there is a need for organizing logically even what we say in English. Therein lies the worth of having studied Latin. No student could have put together a Latin prose sentence or taken apart a bit of translation without being aware of the organization and planning behind it. The ability to organize and plan can help us not only to speak and write logically, but best of all to live logically.

The other languages aforementioned have a more direct value. Of course in traveling and in contact with foreign people they come into play. One of the greatest joys of traveling is to be able to speak to the ordinary people you meet in their native tongues. Spanish has a very close relationship to us. Many students feel that more so-called "Americans" should learn the tongue of their southern neighbors. Spanish and Portuguese are intrinsic elements in the movement for Pan-Americanism. Compulsory Spanish in high school is even visualized by some.

In living logically, in enjoyment of travel, and in contact with people, languages are of tremendous importance.

Language



Is there anyone among us who does not thrill at the thought of Vikings and Crusaders? Anyone who has not had a secret yearning to explore unknown continents and brave great dangers? Who has not complained that she was born too late and everything worth doing has been done? Take heart, all you doleful ones! Remember Alexander the Great who bemoaned his fate for the same reason? History is being made all the time! A history that is just as important as that of olden times because it effects the lives of millions of people.

Miss Garret, the head of the social science department, has graciously agreed to answer some of our questions on why history is important to us and of what value a special aptitude in the social sciences can be. She says that the purpose of our social studies is to develop an inquiring mind in the realm of human relations and to realize problems that the world faces, to develop a realization that we live in a changing world in which the individual, organized society, and social institutions have to adapt themselves, to develop a tolerant attitude toward the points of view and problems of other people, to develop an understanding of the American heritage of democracy and a determination to maintain that heritage in the face of other systems which are a threat to democracy, and to develop social mindedness so that we may work cooperatively in a group and may assume a position of leadership in community activities.

We have among us girls who are especially talented in the subjects of history and economics, and they wonder what field of work they may enter in which they will be able to use this aptitude. There are many jobs which should be filled only by those who are especially interested in the social sciences. First of all there is the teaching of social studies, a field which is open to women, largely. Another growing field which is essentially a woman's job is Social Work. Then there is research work and statistics in the Social Studies field with the various government agencies. There are many positions to be found in the economics division of large business enterprises. Writing in this field is another and important phase of this talent.

Social Science

Physical Training

The word, athletics, calls up in our minds the picture of a football or a baseball field. We hear again the cheers of the excited crowd and we feel the thrill of excitement that is aroused in us by our favorite team. That, however, is not all that athletics should mean to us. What sort of a person does the adjective, athletic, call to mind? Why, a healthy, clear-skinned, bright-eyed, handsome person of course! Any athlete that you can think of is healthy and it is mainly for this reason that physical training is taught in the school. Remember girls, you cannot be beautiful if you are not healthy. Posture, another important attribute of beauty, is stressed in physical training. Exercise, too, for which we have little time during the school year, is given us in gym.

Athletics, especially tennis, swimming and golf, are very interesting to girls and afford a means of spending leisure time in the open.

Dancing is also stressed in physical training. This is quite important for the development of grace and ease of movement. There are many girls among us who have special apttitude for dancing. This is a real talent whether it is in ballet or tap dancing. In musical comedy, there is a demand for tap-dancers. A ballet dancer can find her place in the ballet, on the stage, or perhaps in motion pictures.

The physical training department helps to develop many of our talents, but most important of all, it leads to HEALTH, the most valuable of our possessions.

Secretarial Training is a fairly new subject, and it is not offered in many schools. It aims at giving the girls business technique along particular lines teaching them how to cooperate with others in business, and giving them character education. This is accomplished through the means of the Universal Publishing Company (a fictitious name) where every girl is given an office. There are ten departments in all where the girls take care of mail, gather statistics about the books printed, use the telephone, transcribe letters from the dictaphone and ordinary dictation, collect statistical information on the adding machines, operate the switchboard.

The most recent office added to the course is that of being secretary to various teachers. Certain girls are assigned each week to act as secretaries, and they may do only secretarial work for the teachers. This gives the girls a little training outside of the classroom.

The department feels that this course is a real aid to girls who seek secretarial positions. Of course it is up to all of you potential secretaries to prove it.

For girls who intend to be stenographers or secretaries, a four term course of bookkeeping will give a good working knowledge of bookkeeping. However, a six-term course enables a girl to enter the working world with a thorough knowledge of bookkeeping. Many good positions are obtained by girls who started as bookkeepers. Besides regular accounting, the department offers other subjects; there are Commercial law, business arithmetic, business laboratory, and also a fairly new course in Salesmanship. This course is a very interesting one. The girls start from the beginning by learning all about various materials. No one can sell anything if they do not know what they are selling. This course is a very good one to take if one is interested in selling. It offers good opportunities. Many of the large department stores offer good opportunities for these girls. Of course, one must start from the bottom up, in the packing department for instance, but by starting there one may end up being a first rate saleswoman or even a buyer. Naturally, a girl must show that she has the ability, initiative, and personality which are the qualifications for a position of this sort.

Secretarial Training and Accounting

Textile Arts

Textile Arts is a subject which one girl will feel is as good as any to make up part of an elective, and for another, it is of more importance. For the girl with not too much money to spend on her clothes, this course is a real aid. It is usually more inexpensive to make a dress than to buy one. Then we find the girl who is really talented in this art. She may have a flair for the construction of a dress or for its designing. Or, perhaps she has a knack for making hats. However, to each of these girls the study of Textile Arts has provided her with several basic abilities. They have also been taught the value of charm, personal appearance and good grooming.

Each of the girls may use the knowledge to a different advantage. The business girl must always present a neat, well-groomed appearance. If she has taken this course she will be able to do just that because she will have the ability to select a ready-made garment with an eye to such things as fabric, workmanship, cut and finishing touches. For the homemaker the knowledge of the construction process will prove a real saving, and also will provide individuality in personal dress and in the home. And for the talented girl, what? Many fields are open to her—for example the field of merchandising, dressmaking, or designing.

Mathematics

Some are good at mathematics. Some are not. Most of us, good or bad, however, have been confronted with the problems of why we learn mathematics and what we can do with it in our future lives.

Mr. Arnold, the head of the South School and also the head of the Mathematics Department, has been good enough to answer these questions. First of all, and most important to the majority of us, mathematics is meant to teach us a technique of thinking, that is a way of solving our every day problems by clear, straight-forward thought. Mathematics affects us vitally in our every day lives. It is the very foundation of civilization. We have seen the role mathematics plays in our daily lives, and now let us turn towards the future. What can we do with our special aptitude for mathematics? Well, let's see. It is impossible to enter any field of science, chemistry, physics, etc., without a firm foundation of mathematics. Science and mathematics are closely allied. The field of statistics is open only to those who are especially gifted in mathematics.

Science

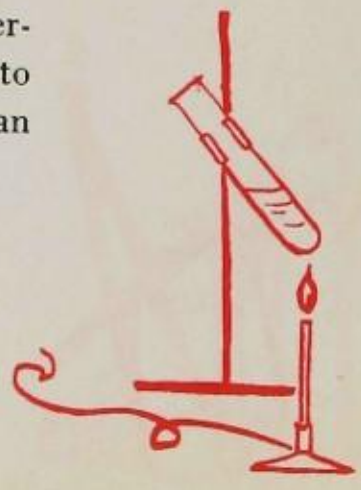
The Science Department, which includes Biology, General Science, Chemistry, and Physics, is wide enough to interest anyone who has the slightest inclination towards bugs or animals, and a curiosity as to what makes the world go round. Most everyone in the school has at one time taken some course in Science, and never can it be said that there is one of us here who has not had some kind of question to ask about it, even if it were only to know the why and wherefore of personal things that bother us. The world is a mass of scientific problems, and we are constantly endeavoring to find the solutions.

Miss Topp, the head of the Science Department, has tried to answer a few questions about why it is taught in the school. She believes we should develop a scientific point of view, personal and social tolerance, the ability to self analysis, and to build up sound mental health. Many a girl has a special talent or adaptability for a certain phase of science. For example, she can reprint diagrams, model from life, or formulate problems and see them through in a laboratory. Teaching, medicine, social welfare, laboratory work, research, dietetics, geology, and anthropology, are fields of endeavor open to women.

Mr. Dow believes that the study of science prepares us to live with greater understanding in this scientific world. He thinks that the natural desire of pupils for information shows the inclination they have towards further interests in this field.

Mr. Dorin holds that science has many rewards — thoroughness, patience, and a sense of personal accomplishment. A good worker possesses courage, alertness, the ability to think independently, honesty, and a love of truth for its own sake. She may become a beautician, with a knowledge of cosmetics chemistry, a journalist for a scientific publication, do museum work, or home economics.

In other words, the vocations in which women scientists may engage, are numerous and varied. The object of teaching science in the school is to enable us to engage in these positions, and to provide a strong, solid foundation on which we can base our future life.



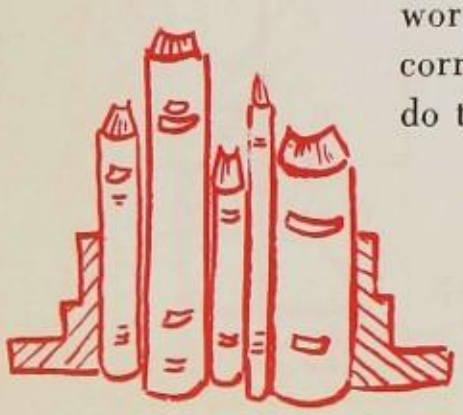
English

The talent that is the English departments' business to develop is writing. At least that is the more obvious deduction. But in reality, skill in writing is only one result of our training in English. All of us should write correctly. We cannot all have a special talent in writing, however. But there is another great skill to be learned from the study of English that is more important than creative ability. Proficiency in reading is an achievement for which we should all strive.

"But," you are saying, "I have known how to read for a long time. There is nothing more than can be taught to me about reading."

Of course at this late date if any of the Seniors did not know how to read, their education would have been a sad failure. But merely calling words off a page is not skill in reading. Have you not often read a sentence over and over again to grasp its meaning? Have you not ever come to the end of a paragraph and found yourself without the slightest knowledge of what it was about? Have you not ever had to read a poem time and time again to understand the thought that was expressed in it? These situations have happened to almost all of us. It is probably because they miss the meaning of what is on a printed page that some people say they do not like to read. Real reading, real enjoyment of literature is a talent. It is a talent that can only be developed by living with books and by setting your mind to the task of understanding them.

We often have thoughts that cannot be spoken. We often imagine that if we could sit at a desk with a piece of paper in front of us, we could write down those thoughts. But if we ever actually tried it, we would find that writing our thoughts is a talent in itself. It is not easy to convey what we mean by using words. The less of a barrier the paper and pen becomes the greater is the talent. But still greater a talent than the conveyance of thought is the ability to express feeling through words. It is only practice that makes for correct writing. Where our writing is correct, one barrier has been broken down. Clear thinking and sincere feeling will do the rest.



INANIMATE

Yes, one can grow to love inanimate things like the rain, or lonesome, black trees, or a violin.

What makes me think so?

I know because I've done it. Listen:

I was small, oh very small when it happened. All day it had been dark and wet. Music was all about the house, in the corners of rooms and tumbling up and down the staircase. What kind of music? I forget, but it was played on a violin by my father.

It was played by my father, my tall, care-bent father, on a violin. I had been looking at the cold, swift rain. My chin rested on the window sill. There was a lonesome, black tree outside, so near I could almost reach through the rain and touch one of its lean branches. But I dared not open the window for Mother sat in the corner, sewing, and Mother hated drafts.

Yes, Mother hated drafts and she hated the rain and friendless trees and music and the violin. I can believe now that what happened was best and that the fretful unhappiness of the day was leading up to it.

You see Mother had never loved the violin, nor had she ever liked music. Today, she sat here in my room, pretending that the silver lines of melody winding about the house weren't scratching at her heart.

What about my father, my tall, care-bent father? He had lived with the violin as I have with the rain and leafless trees—always.

We hadn't had dinner yet. Father had practiced all day and Mother was unhappy and weary over it. You see, there was a wall between them, a hard impenetrable shaft of music. I had seen it in the dismay in my father's eyes. I had heard it in words that were never spoken.

When dinner was ready, Mother took me downstairs. The music stopped. Have you ever noticed how the air vibrates when music stops? In reality it doesn't stop. It never can.

I saw Father put down the violin, so thin and fragile. He layed it on the deep couch in the parlor. The instrument was so light that it hardly sank in the cushions.

There was strange, stilted conversation at dinner. It went like this:

"Spring is so soon now, do we need more coal?"

"No, with Spring so near we can think of shrubs and flowers and a garden for Ann."

"Must Ann have a garden?"

"Oh yes, gardens can be to children like—like music to grown-ups."

"All right, if it won't be too expensive."

"It won't, I'll help with it."

"Are you ready to go in the other room?"

"Yes. Come Ann dear, come."

We went in the other room, all three of us. Father led me to the window and we looked at the rain together. I cooled my hands on the glass and he whispered words to me about a garden and the springtime that was not too far away.

Father asked what melody I would like to hear and I knew I must go to bed soon. We both turned around.

Mother stood looking down at the deep couch where she had been sittitng. She bent forward and picked up the violin.

It was crushed to pieces!

How had it happened?

Later she said she sat on it by mistake. I can never forget her face. It looked so cold, almost frozen. Father, tall and care-bent Father, was lifeless for a moment. A tiny part of him must have died with the passing of the music.

Father came back to life soon and Mother grew less cold. Words became more frequent. Violins are expensive, you see. There was no music for Mother at least. But there were ghosts of melodies from the dead violin for Father and me. In the spring he made me a garden, and the lonesome tree bloomed and before long the rain stopped falling.

Yes, one can grow to love inanimate things like the rain, lonesome black trees, or a violin.

What makes me think so?

I know, because I've done it.

Button, Button, Who's Got the Button—

The interests of people are varied. Some collect stamps; some collect autographs; some collect books; some find scrap-books an interesting pastime; others have discovered that collecting humorous sayings and witticisms is fascinating. I guess I'm just different. I collect buttons.

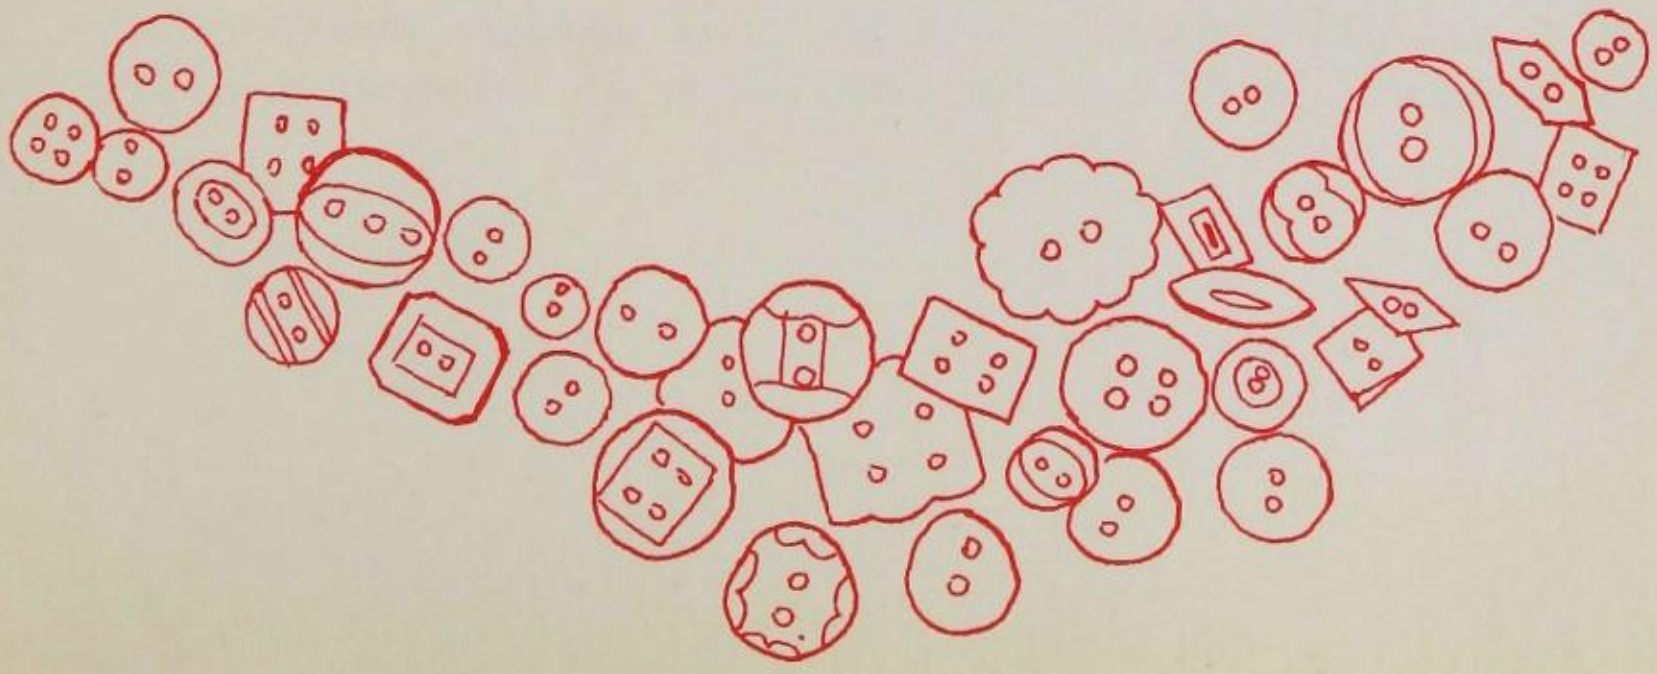
Buttons? Those ornaments on one's dress, coat, suit, or blouse. They serve their purpose. Some say they're old-fashioned. It's zippers that are in vogue. But, I like buttons—modernistic cork, old-fashioned pearl, wooden Mexican sombreros, tiny Schiaparellian hands; classic circles on men's suits, sparkling sequin discs on girls' gowns, huge moon-shaped knobs on a man's overcoat, minute delicate specks on babies' undergarments . . . buttons!

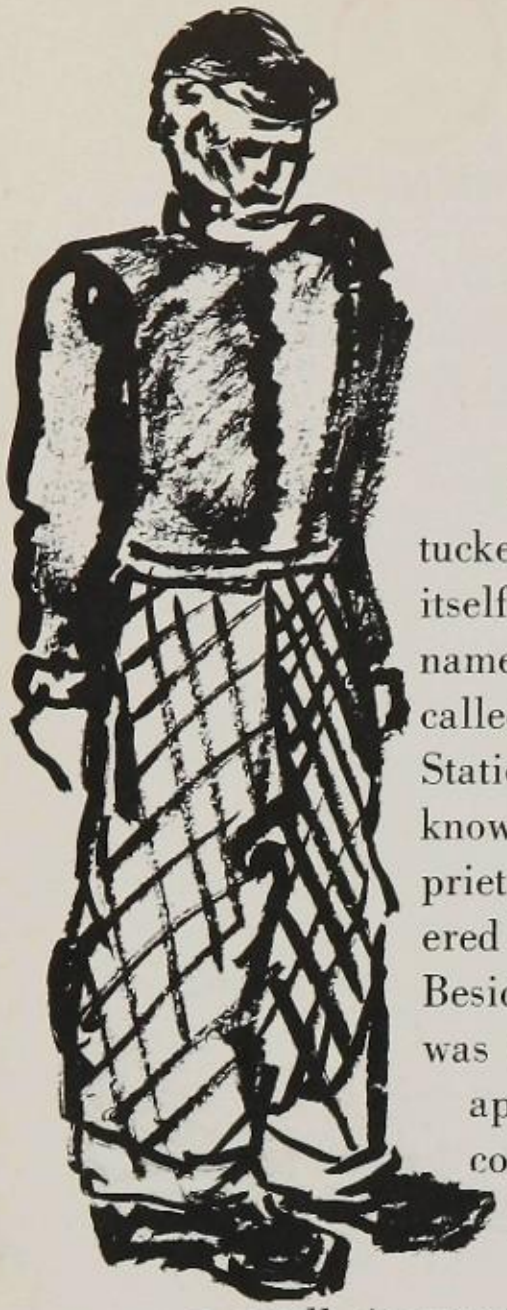
To me, buttons are not solely, "a fastening to be sewn on an article of dress usually as a catch," as Mr. Webster terms them. Buttons are people. Individuals with a life of their own. They come into the world shining and glistening in their immaturity. How do they go out?

As a child of average intelligence, my parents were ever trying to comprehend my total lack of interest for dolls—those adored objects of girlish devotion. I refused to play with Mary Jane of the flaxen curls and Patsy Lee of ringlets. For hours I would sit in the remotest corner of my father's department store, oblivious to all my surroundings. There was Johnny Doughboy going off to war, marching in the midst of all the other soldiers. I had hundreds of round brown buttons. And there was Mary Rhinestone—a dazzling creature. The illumination of her character showed itself so aptly in the brilliancy of her features. Perhaps she was destined to marry George Broderick Fitzmaurice Patent Leather—the happy-go-lucky playboy of her dreams. The blackness of his tuxedo always recalls the density of his career to my mind. And Andre Splotched—who was destined to become a great artist. I can visualize the vermilion, the green, the aquamarine and multi-colors of his palette. They were in readiness for the slightest wim of his brush aspiring towards a great masterpiece.

The study of buttons is the study of people. Yes, richman, poorman, beggar man, doctor, lawyer, Indian Chief—they're all there.

BEVERLY SUSER





JOE

Beneath the roar of the Third Avenue Elevated, and tucked away inconspicuously between stores much larger than itself, stands a tiny little candy shop known as "Joe's." It is named in honor of the proprietor. Now, it could have been called "Ye East Side Candy Shoppe," or the "Julia Richman Stationery Store," being situated a few blocks from this well-known institution of learning. When we questioned the proprietor about the christening of his store, however, we discovered that he didn't want "to put on airs," as he expressed it. Besides, he thought the good, plain, well-known name of Joe was quite appropriate for his little shop. We promptly made apologies and assured him that no offense was meant. Upon considering what he had said, we came to the conclusion that Joe was right. The name did suit the store.

Now, let me tell you a little about Joe himself. Joe is a small, inconspicuous man of about forty-eight. He is the kindest, most sympathetic man, I think I'll ever know. From six o'clock in the morning until about ten at night, Joe stands patiently behind the little counter, living in a world all his own. He continually scours the silver and marble fixtures. Joe's patience holds us in a sort of awe. He can stand for fully ten minutes (we timed him) pointing out candy to a dirty-faced little boy. When the speechless customer finally decides what he wants, Joe accepts a copper penny and chuckling softly to himself, watches the little feet run out of the store. When we reprimand Joe for being so patient for a penny, he simply smiles and says, "Patience, my children, costs you nothing and gives you a great deal."

Joe has an "honor system." He says he cannot be bothered with writing up accounts for his various customers (and he has many). He puts them on their honor, seeming to forget all about their debts until they pay up. We have used this system many times when our allowances were diminished. When we pay him back, Joe simply looks at us a moment and says, "Yes, yes, that is correct, thank you." I remember asking him why he didn't write down these accounts and he said very kindly, "When I cease to trust my friend, then will I close down my store."

During the cold weather we became aware of Joe's winter costume. Let us start from the bottom up in describing it. First, his summer socks were discarded and in their place we saw heavy-knitted green stockings. We sometimes wondered who had the patience to make them. Not wanting to appear inquisitive, however, we did not ask. We laughingly called his trousers "Sharpie Pants" because they were baggy and the cuffs were turned up. In fact he looked so comical whenever he came out from behind the counter (which was very seldom) that we always laughed. Ah! At last we come to Jake's sweaters. He wore at least six; some with zippers, some with buttons, and some with hooks. He topped these off with a thick wool scarf, wrapped many times about his neck. Lastly, there was his ever faithful cap. Winter or Summer, rain or shine, Joe is never seen without his little brown cap. We asked him why he always wore it. He replied that he was so accustomed to his cap that he sometimes went to bed wearing it. However, I think I have discovered the real reason. I was in the store one torrid day last summer. Joe apparently forgetting himself, took off his cap to wipe the perspiration from his forehead. Lo and behold! Not a single hair was there on the top of his glistening head! With a stare he remembered me, and quickly put his cap back. He turned nonchalantly to see if I were looking. I, of course, became deeply interested in a magazine at that moment. I seemed to sense the relief he felt in thinking that I had not discovered his great secret.

Tomorrow when I come in he will great me with a cheery good morning. When I ask him if any of the girls have come in yet he will say, "Not yet, not yet," and either go back to his polishing or to showing candy to a greedy little boy.

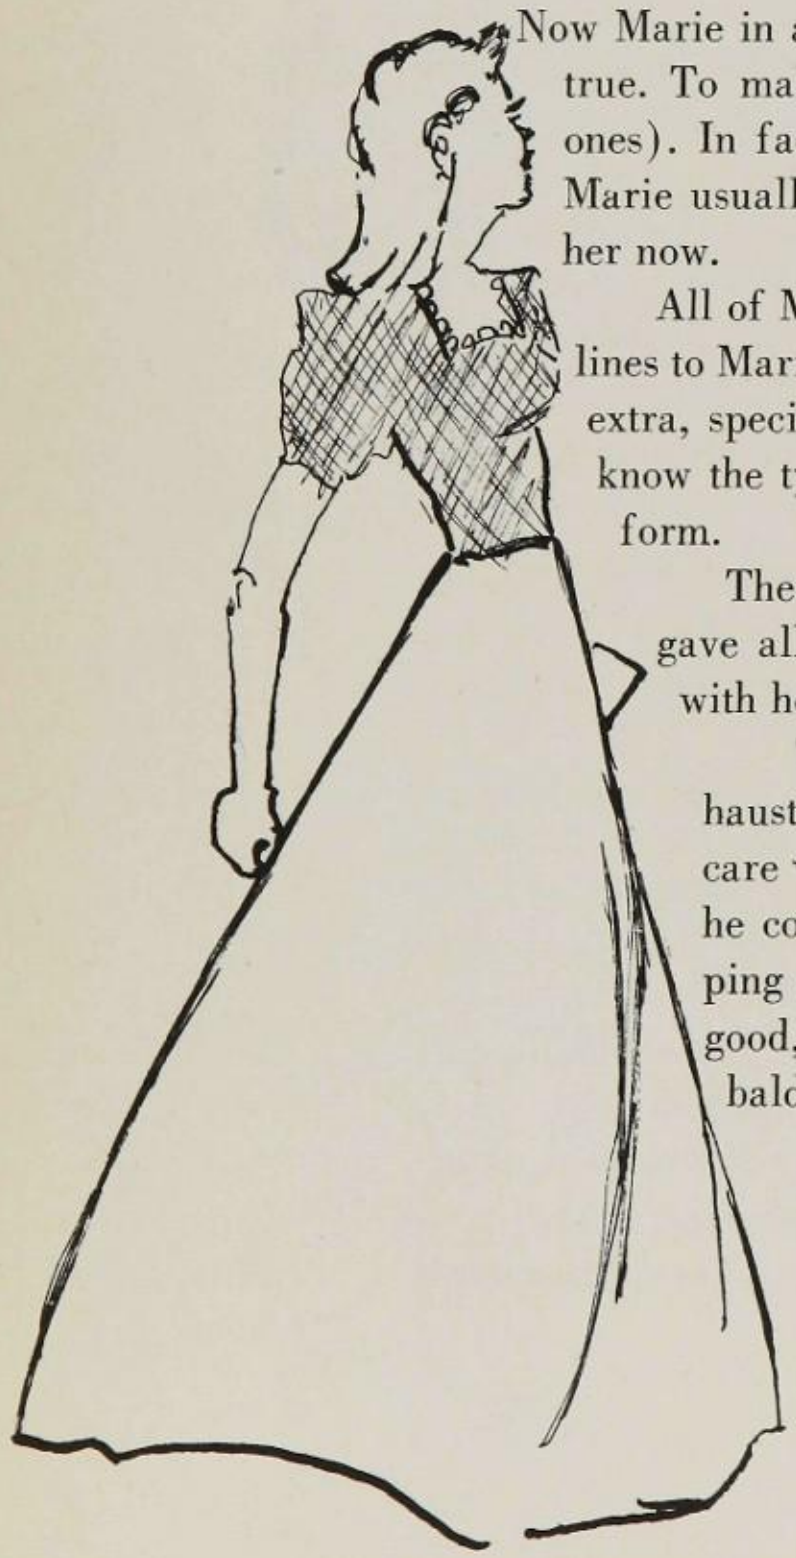
"Hooking a Boy for the Prom"

"Here it is May 29, and the prom—the prom that I've been waiting for for four long years (I suspect that's why I entered high school—to go to the prom—also the compulsory education law) will be on the first of June.

O, I can hardly wait. I've got such a 'snazzy' gown—lots of skirt and silver trimmings. Will I wow them or will I? In fact—"

"Wait a minute; who are you taking?" broke in a bevy of voices.

Marie looked blank. "Who am I taking? Why, I'm taking—Oh, my goodness, who am I taking!! I completely forgot! I don't even know one fellow that I could take. Gals, this is serious. You've got to help me!"



Now Marie in all her four years never had a date—inconceivable, but true. To make matters worse, she didn't know any males (young ones). In fact she didn't even have a brother. It so happened that Marie usually received 99's on her report, but, that was no help to her now.

All of Marie's loyal friends helped. They introduced their stag-lines to Marie very graciously. But no, Marie wanted someone super, extra, special, someone who would make the girls' eyes pop! You know the type: Tall, dark, handsome and perhaps wearing a uniform.

The 30th went by. Her friends took her to their clubs. She gave all the fellows the "once-over." None of them coincided with her idea of a "prom man."

The 31st came, and nearly went. The stag lines were exhausted. It was now or never, prom or no prom. She didn't care whom she took now. Maybe her uncle would do. At least he could waltz without the all-too common "talent" of stepping on one's toes. He even had a tux. That sounds pretty good, doesn't it? But, and it's a big but, he was forty and bald, oh so bald! Eyes would pop all right!

The night of the 31st came; no boy yet. "I'll tell you what, Marie. I'll ask Jim. He's an old friend of mine. He's a fiend for proms and can he dance? You don't mind a blind date, do you?" Thus spoke up one of Marie's friends. "Mind! Why, you're an angel in disguise, you're wonderful, you're marvelous. Here I am in the depths of despair because I have no man for the prom, and you offer me one. Darling, anything in pants will have to do at this, my hour of need."

June 1st—Prom night. The bell rang. One last look in the mirror. She looked swell if she had to say so herself. Arming herself with a smile, she braved herself for come what may. She cautiously opened the door; her eyes widened in horror. But, it's impossible. This creature was at least 6 inches shorter than herself! Why, it just wasn't done—one didn't go to one's Prom with a—a baby!

Conquering her emotions, she practiced her "line"—the one she had rehearsed yesterday. He used his "line" too.

They arrived at the Ritz. Head in air, she preceded Jim into the ballroom. She hoped they wouldn't laugh or poke each other knowingly. No one laughed. No one, except a few classmates, acknowledged her presence. They were too busy.

It wasn't so bad after all—and he was a good dancer. This was her prom.

STUFF

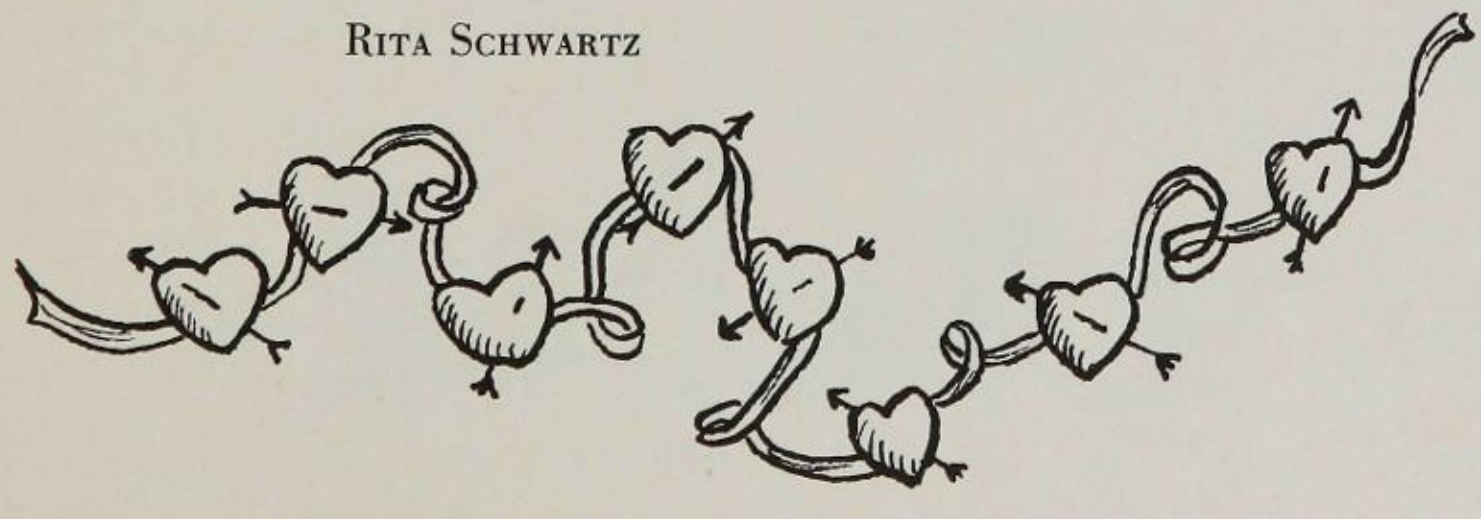
It's not that I'm old fashioned
Or the modern things abhor
I like the new-fangled notions
And streamlining do adore
Can openers and zippers
Bring joy unto my heart
And from my automatic toaster
I would never, never part
It's not against the radio
Or camera that I moan
But darn that new extension—
And I thought we were alone!

RITA SCHWARTZ

OF ONE I LOVE

Evening
And the music of the wind
That sings to me
Songs of one I love.
Melody,
Return another night
To chant the sad, sweet eyes,
The words of one I love.

MIGNON HOMER



LOVE DREAM

In the glowing white of winter
When the shimmer of a star
Brings out the silver splinter
Of a diamond hidden there . . .
You become an empty echo
When the moon is dull,
And the sun-warmth adds no beauty
To the bare brown hill.
So is the growing Springtime
Like the stupid mirth
of an empty headed laughter
in a moment's birth
Just the answer to the echo
Of a lonely heart
When the fire warmth of winter
Will too soon depart.
Oh bring the chill of evening
To the morning air.
For the sweeter breath of sunlight
What is hidden there.
And return the empty hours
That are yours alone
Till the spring can call the robin
From where it has flown.
Maybe when your cooling rapture
Will become a flame again,
No years will ever part us. . . .
. . . Then.

BERNICE STERN

I'M IN LOVE

Oh, I'm in love with the golden air,
In love with the singing flowers,
In love with the curve of the wing of a bird,
In love with the fleeting hours.
And I'm in love with dreaming dreams,
In love with the joy of giving;
I have no love to call my own,
But I'm in love with living.

BETH HARBER

PLEA

The day you left, upon my heart,
A weight of grief did press
But, oh, my darling
Hurry back
Before the weight grows less.

RITA SCHWARTZ

SUNRISE

Morning awoke faintly tinged,
With fairy pastels lightly fringed.
But decked herself in wilder hues
Of blatant golds and daring blues.
Then noisy colors my sleep invade
And thus annoyed I draw the shade.

Never absent, never late;
Elizabeth's always up-to-date.

WALLACH, HELEN
Secretary; Inspector; Aide; Traffic, Property and Study Marshal; Tutor.
A box opened wide with ribbons of pink
Helen so pretty stood on the brink.

WALSH, ALICE
Aide; Secretary; Inspector; Bluebird Agent.
Full of life and full of fun
A friend and a pal to everyone.

WALSH, MARY
Captain; Marshal; Aide; Inspector.
A sweet little blonde,
Of whom everyone is fond.

WALSH, KATHLEEN
Captain; Secretary; Inspector.
Coy and sweet,
Makes her complete.

WALTON, ROBERTA
Captain; Secretary; Aide; Traffic and Library Marshal; Study Hall Service Squad; Usher.
Bobbie is our shining light, for her there looms a future bright.

WARANKIEWICZ, HELEN
Captain; Secretary; Inspector; Traffic and Study Marshal.
Her voice is like a mocking bird,
Always enjoyed whenever it's heard.

WASHINGTON, LOVETTE
Traffic Marshal; Captain; Inspector; Aide.
A charming girl and sweet
Whom everyone is anxious to meet.

*WASICKA, SABINE
Arista Secretary; Marshal; Tutor; Captain; Aide; Personality Leader.
In school she's quiet and demure,
But outside of school we're not so sure.

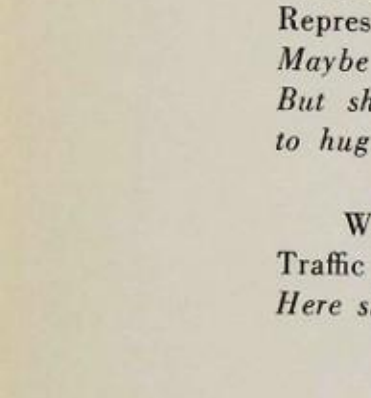
WAYNOROWSKI, HELEN B.
Study and Traffic Marshal; Captain; Inspector; Secretary; G.O. Representative.
Maybe a jitterbug,
But she sure is one you'd like to hug.

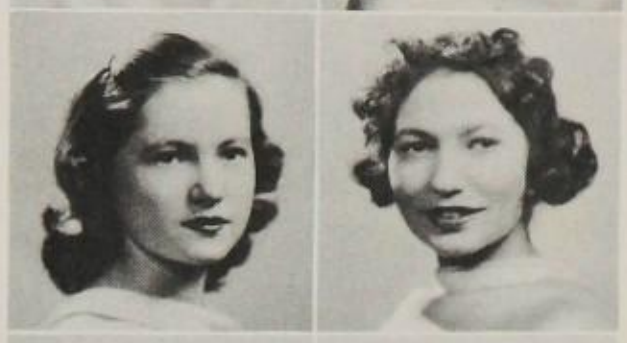
WEAVER, MARJORIE
Traffic Marshal.
Here she is the riot of the town.

WEGRZYN, LOUISE
Captain; Secretary; Inspector; Librarian; Bluebird Agent; Traffic, Property and Study Marshal; Bank Representative.
Quiet and refined,
She's simply divine.

WEINBERG, VIRGINIA SUE
President and Secretary of French-American Student League; Spotlight, Bluebird, News and G.O. Representative; Marshal; Captain.
What's better than one of them?
Two of them.

WEINBERG, PAULA MERYL
President and Secretary of French-American Student League; Bank and News Agent; Tutor; Captain; Marshal; Secretary; Aide; Inspector.
Intelligent, modern, "doubly" nice,
Pretty enough to look at twice.





WEINSTEIN, ELIZABETH
Secretary; Housekeeper; Cafeteria.
Ever precious as a pearl
This laughing, pleasant, friendly girl.

WIENER, BETTY JANE
Property, Study Hall and Head Study Hall Marshal.
Her dancing is a delight to both eye and ear,
Her intellect a quality that knows no fear.

WEINER, DINA
Secretary; Captain; Marshal.
Beautiful eyes, lovely hair;
Always charming, never a care.

WEITZEN, MURIEL
Captain; Secretary; Traffic Marshal.
Pert, pretty and petite
Personality like hers can't be beat.

WENZEL, ELISE
Inspector; Sanitation and Traffic Marshal; Sewing Aide.
A charming girl, and very sweet,
Whom everyone is anxious to meet.

WEISMAN, EVELYN
Secretary; Marshal; Spotlight Representative.
If you are looking for someone that's one of the best;
Evie will surely pass the test.

WEXELBAUM, JUNE
Aide; Marshal; Captain.
If we could girls with jewels compare
Our June would be a gem most rare.

WHITTED, BERNICE
Care of trays for teachers.
Quiet and friendly.

WIDYNSKA, HELEN
Secretary; Captain; Gym Leader; Inspector; Property Marshal.
Witty, wise, never slow
She's one girl it's fun to know.

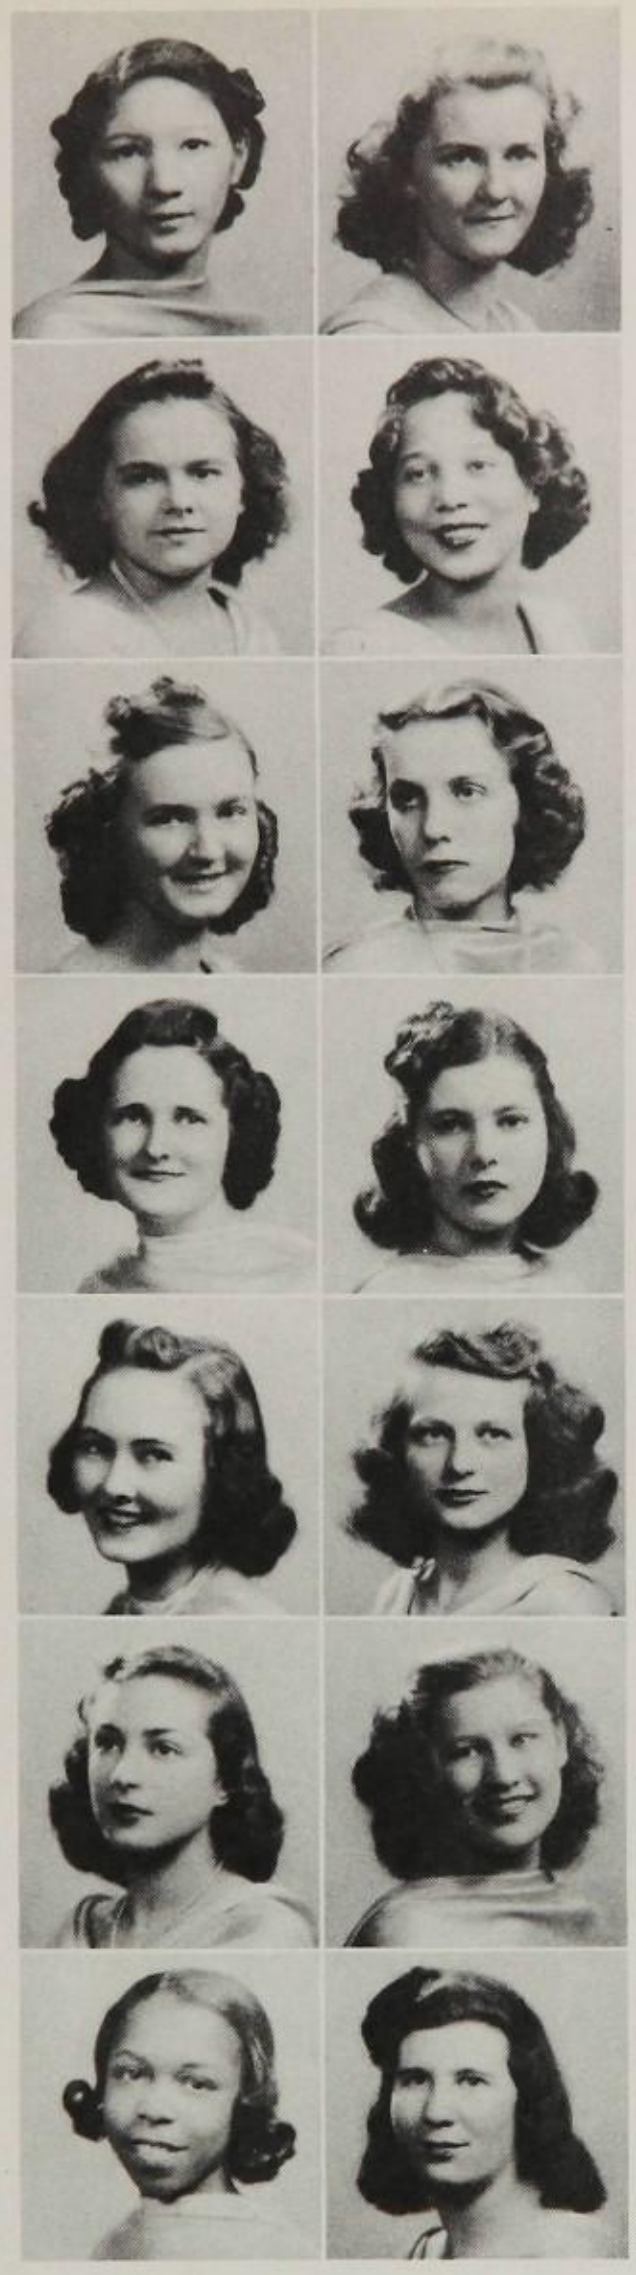
WILKINS, FRANCES
Frances is joyful with an instinct for art,
In water or oils she'll do her part.

WILKINSON, CATHERINE F.
Captain; Secretary; Inspector; Personality Leader; Marshal.
A pleasant face that will always smile,
A swell personality, a friend worthwhile.

WILKINSON, KATHRYN B.
Captain; Secretary.
Here's a girl who meets the test,
She's always aiming to do her best.

WILLIAM, ESTHER
News Agent; Secretary; Aide; Captain.
A charming girl,
As lovely as a pearl.

WILLIAMS, STELLA
Study Hall Marshal.
Small, petite, and just too sweet!



WILLIAMSON, LILIAS
Lunchroom, Library and Traffic Marshal; Aide; Leaders' Club; Secretary; Homework Checker; News Agent; Program and Clerical Worker; Attendance Squad.
Her charm strides the sight, her merit wins the soul.

WILSON, BUNZEH
Study Hall and Traffic Marshal; Secretary; Inspector.
Sincere and always on the go.

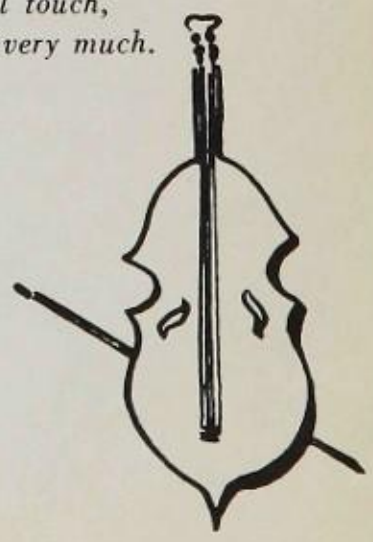
WILSON, MAY
Aide; Secretary; Inspector; Traffic Marshal.
A true friend upon whom you can depend.

WINKLER, ROSALIND
Head Study Hall Marshal; Traffic and Cafeteria Marshal; News Representative; Captain; Secretary; Graduation Usher.
Wee Rosalind Winkler.

WINTER, IRMA
Secretary; News and Bank Representative; Inspector.
To know her is to love her.

WINTER, JOHANNA
Traffic, Study Hall and Dismissal Marshal; Tutor; Secretary; Treasurer; Captain; Inspector; Personality Leader.
A bright student and a fine friend.

WISTINETZKI, ELLEN
Ellen with the musical touch,
Makes us all like her very much.



WITTICH, JOSEPHINE
Captain; Secretary; Inspector; Aide; Personality Leader; Marshal; Homework Attendant.
It fits her to a "T," we mean personality.

WHITLOCK, HELEN
Columnist for Richman News; Secretary; Captain; Aide; Bluebird Agent; N.S. Assistant.
Sophisticated Lady.

WOLF, ALICE
Captain; Secretary; Tutor; Study Hall, Traffic, Gym, Property and Bookroom Marshal.
Charming and wise with brown eyes.

WOLF, DOROTHY
Captain; Inspector.
Frank and square,
You've got something there.

*WOLFSTEINER, THERESA
Secretary; Richman News Agent; Inspector; Study Hall Marshal; Tutor.
Smart and small,
A friend to all.

WOOD, HELEN
Captain; Aide; Secretary; Traffic Marshal; Personality Leader; Mimeograph Squad.
No knocks but all boosts.

YASILLO, THERESA
Secretary; Marshal.
Always smiling, always gay,
She makes our troubles fly away.

YATES, MARY SCOTT
Spotlight Representative; Gym, Personality Leader; Desk Girl; Traffic Marshal; Captain; Aide; Treasurer; Inspector.
Pretty, witty, full of fun,
Her heart is a thing to be won.

YVEN, YVONNE
Captain; Secretary; Inspector.
Here is a phantom of delight.

*YATOWSKY, OLGA
Captain; Aide; Secretary; Treasurer; G.O. Representative; Personality Leader; Inspector; Homework Attendant; Study Hall Marshal.
If personality is needed to fill the bill,
She'll fill it if any will.

ZAHATYNSKI, SOPHIE
Bluebird and News Agent; Inspector.
A good pal, a jolly friend,
Always ready to lend a hand.

ZAIA, VERA
Traffic and Property Marshal; Key Girl; Inspector; Tutor.
Good things come in small packages.

ZALBURG, HELEN
Personality Leader; Secretary; Captain; Inspector; Aide; Study Hall and Traffic Marshal.
If silence were golden, she would be a pauper.

ZALKIND, DIANE
Talent Scout of Bluebird; Study Hall and Traffic Marshal; Captain; Aide; Secretary; Publicity Staff.
Smiling through.

ZEFFERT, RHONA
Study Hall and Traffic Marshal; Personality Leader; Captain; Secretary; Aide.
It's delightful to be merry.

*ZEITLIN, JOYCE
Spotlight Literary Editor; Aunt Julia; Intelligence Squad; Bluebird Staff and Representative; Tutor; Marshal; Captain; News Agent.
The future must hold happiness and success too
How could it be otherwise for so charming a girl as you.

ZIERER, ANNA
Glee Club; Inspector; G.O. Representative; Traffic Marshal; Secretary; Captain.
Her whole description is complete,
With just one word; that is—sweet.

ZIMAN, AUDREY
Captain; Aide; Inspector; Traffic and Head Study Hall Marshal; Bank Representative.
And little Audrey just laughed and laughed.

ZIMIC, ROSE
Captain; Secretary; Inspector.
Sweet and shy,
I wonder why.

ZIMMERMAN, LOIS
Captain; Secretary; Aide; Sanitation Marshal.
It's nice to be natural
When you're naturally nice.

ZIRPIADES, MARY
Captain; Aide; Inspector; Locker Marshal; Aunt Julia; Bluebird Typist; Secretary; Tutor.
A girl so merry, blithe, and gay,
Vivacious in a charming way.

ZITEK, HELEN
Secretary; Marshal; Homework Monitor.
Like a peanut bar, sweet.

ZUBEK, JOHANNA
Bluebird Agent; Secretary; Traffic Marshal; Mrs. Wilhelm; Aide; Helper in Typing.
Always charming, always neat,
Here's a girl that can't be beat.

ZULLO, IDA
Head Sanitation Marshal and Stenographer; Bluebird and News Agent; Captain; Aide.
Busy when the day's begun;
Busy when the day is done.

BREQUET, MADELYN
Captain; Secretary; Inspector.
Stay as sweet as you are.

WALDMAN, SALLY
Personality Agent; Lost and Found, Study Hall and Traffic Marshal.
Very friendly and sincere,
Want to know her? Look right here.

CAMERA SHY

*ALEXANIAN, LUCILE
Inter-Linias Art Editor; Social Science Workshop Member; Program Worker, Marshal; Inspector; Aide.
Ambition—to be a teacher in Julia Richman—oh!

BOWEN, VIRGINIA
Captain; Secretary; Aide; G.O. Representative; Traffic & Study Hall Marshal; Inspector.
Her smile and humor all unfold
A heart that's made of purest gold.

BOWER, DORIS
Calm, cool and collected.

CATUCCI, DOROTHY
Aide; Marshal.
A true friend indeed!

COOTE, JOAN
Traffic Marshal; Inspector; Secretary.
Sweet and friendly, you can bet
The nicest girl you ever met.

DOHERTY, MARY
Secretary; Inspector; Aide; Traffic Marshal.
Nothing to knock, everything to boost.

FEIGEN, GLORIA
Marshal; Inspector.
To know her is to love her.

FRIEDMAN, HILDA
Secretary; Inspector; Aide.
A friend like her you'd like to keep.

GENOVESE, PHILOMENA J.
Traffic Marshal.
A charming personality.

HAMILTON, MARY JANE
Aide; Marshal.
Success is bound to come your way.

HASELKORN, ESTELLE
Marshal; Inspector.
Good luck to a good friend!

HUTCHENS, KATHARINE K.
Aide.
Delightful to know.

KAPFER, VIRGINIA MARY
Marshal.
Always cheerful, always gay,
How could she be any other way?

KURKJIAN, KATHERINE
News and Bluebird Agent; Inspector; Secretary.
Serious when work comes her way,
But when there's fun, she knows how to play.

LEONE, CAROLINE
Secretary; G.O. Representative; Mimeograph Squad; Aide; Inspector; Program Committee; Locker and Traffic Marshal.
Dainty, modest, fair is she,
A charming girl we all agree.

MACAULEY, ELEANOR
Modest and fair is she,
A charming girl we all agree.

MARCANTINIO, ANTOINETTE
Captain; Secretary; Aide.
A nice girl to know.

MATEJOV, ERMA
Inspector; Marshal; Secretary.
A lovely girl in every way,
She does a good turn every day.

McCOY, DOROTHY
Sanitation Squad.
Very bright, a good sport too
With a sense of humor like a rainbow hue.

MELGAR, CARMEN
Captain.
A knock for her is hard to find;
For she is of the nicest kind.

MICHEL, ELAINE
Traffic Marshal; Secretary.
Elaine can't decide though she's very dutiful
If she'll be a poet, an actress, or just plain beautiful.

MINTON, BERNICE THERESA
Marshal.
Sometimes pensive, sometimes gay,
Always nice in every way.

PAKAREIT, MARY
Aide; Marshal.
Just a bundle of good cheer!

ROGLER, MARGARET
Study Hall Marshal.
Ful of fun, liked by everyone.

SKAHILL, FLORENCE C.
Inspector; Personality Leader; Aide.
If laughs can keep a girl alive,
She'll live to be 105.

STOCKER, DORIS
Aide; Captain.
She's a girl we all know well,
By the way, we think she's swell.

STRASSER, MEDEA
Always sweet, always neat,
The kind of girl that can't be beat.

SWING, GLORIA
Captain; Secretary; Inspector.
A girl of personality.

TROJAN, MILDRED MARIE
Marshal; Aide.
True blue, all the way through.

*VIGHI, AURORA
Captain; Aide; Marshal.
An actress she will be with charming air,
And gleam of stardust in her hair.

WALKIEWICZ, SOPHIA T.
Marshal.
Always ready to lend a hand.

WALLACE, EMILY
Captain; Secretary; Inspector.
To be her friend is a delight.

WHITE, EVELYN
Captain; Sanitation Marshal; Librarian; Aide; Secretary.
A blue-eyed blonde who is very sweet and obliging.

WILLIAMS, KATHLEEN
Secretary; Bluebird Agent; Inspector; Aide; Study Hall, Lunch Room and Library Marshal; Assistant Inspector; Infirmary Aide.
Stay as sweet as you are.

Ode to the Future

On to the years ahead, who knows what trial
Will hold our eager footsteps from the road,
What unforeseeing hand will halt our stride,
And add the ache of tears to our full load?
The years are kind to those of us who try,
And hold our dreams too high to let them rust.
We must gain strength from fighting off our pain
Before the world will look at us with trust.
The time is near when we will close the door
Behind the shelter of the red brick wall,
And step into the footsteps placed before
And set our pace in answer to our call.

MISS GENEVIEVE HAYES

MISS BLANCHE HOWELL

ADMINISTRATION

Miss Hayes

As Head of the Cooperative Annex, we at the main building seldom see Miss Genevieve Hayes. In spite of this, however, we are aware of her splendid leadership.

Miss Howell

Supervising us from the North School Office is Miss Blanche Howell. A benevolent ruler is she, with a place of her own in every Senior's heart.

SENIOR OFFICE

Mrs. Denson

The dynamic, busy little woman running the Senior Office is Mrs. Mary Denson. It is every graduate's regret that she knew Mrs. Denson for only one term.

Mrs. Shaw

Mrs. Katherine Shaw has been the adviser for our class for eight terms. But for her help and cooperation, we could not have had such a worthwhile high school career.

MRS. MARY DENSON

MRS. KATHERINE SHAW

To Anita - in appreciation of all the fun, all the fine cooperation she gave me in term 8. And for happy hours with the Hhermans -

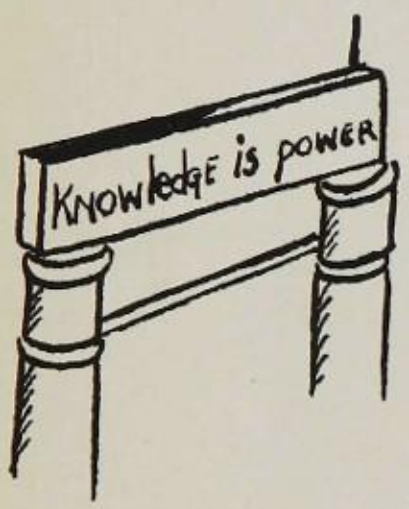
Freshman Year

"Knowledge is Power" we read
On the front of Richman High
Where four years ago, we came
With the will to do or die.
Aunt Julias were the first to hear
Our never-ending questions.
They helped us learn the traffic rules
And offered kind suggestions.
With intelligence tests and program cards
We entered high school education
To get things free we paid our dues
And joined the General Organization.
Assemblies and the first-term dance
Were quick to heal our freshman blues.
School spirit soon led us to buy
The "Bluebird" and the "Richman News."
At last for all the years to come
We made one resolution.
We vowed to change dear Julia Richman
To a Co-ed institution.



Sophomore Year

At the onset of our third term
Came the girls from junior high
'Twasn't long ere many a book-worm
Was moaning "Me oh my!"
For soon the English problems came
And classes became tougher for
Most of us girls, who changed the name
From Sophomore to "suffer more!"
So we ripened and we grew
Like blossoms on a tree
And of course we thought we knew
All that was or is to be.
But all our professed knowledge
Plus our undying credence
Would not get us into college
For we had to pass the regents.
Thus we buckled down to cram
With a fear that made us flinch
But upon taking the exams
We found the regents were a cinch?

Junior Year

Two long long years have come and gone
We've two long years to go
When we shall have as our rewards
Diplomas grand to show.
Those interviews for Arista —
We trembled—well we might!
And then the installation came
With us in dresses white.
That afternoon there was a tea
There also were some cakes.
We ate and ate with all our might ('Twas worth the tummy aches).
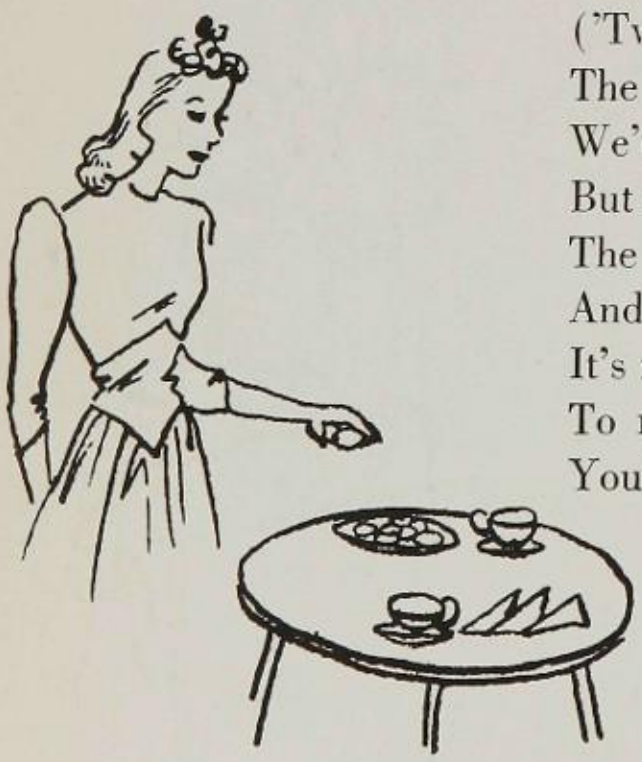
The Junior Prom we didn't have—
We'd meant to have it too.
But soon our plans went all awry
The dance it was taboo.
And that's the end of our third year,
It's now the final stage.
To read about our Senior Year
You'll have to turn the page.



Senior Year

The Senior has emerged from these,
Her metamorphosis discrete,
And four year toil has shown its mark,
Maturity complete.
The Senior dance with Stuyvesant,
And then the Senior Prom,
Red Letter Day . . . our memories
Of these will linger on.
The service pins for faithful work,
The pictures that we took,
The knocks and boosts and the awards
That go into the Senior Book.
Our school life is the happiest
When in our Senior Year,
But graduation leaves us
With a sigh and with a tear.
So we complete a four-year span
To some, school life is ended,
But Julia Richman to us all
Our hearts, it has befriended.
